

Congratulations on your first NRGship shipment

NO “Pickup Summary Barcode” Needed

If you have been using Worldship in the past - both you and your UPS Driver are accustomed to having an end of day report with the “Pickup Summary Barcode” (the document scanned by the driver at time of pickup).

This is not needed when using internet-based systems such as www.ups.com and NRGship. Your shipment details are transmitted electronically for each individual shipment at the time it is processed in NRGship.

Explaining that you are using NRGship to your Driver

At pickup time, if the UPS driver asks for an end of day barcode, simply say that www.ups.com was used to process the shipments, and a bar code is not created and is not needed.

If the driver still thinks an end of day is required, point out the ‘bow tie’ box that is printed in the lower right corner of the shipping label—this should be the signal to the driver that an end of day barcode is not needed. There is no limit on the number of shipments a driver will take without a bar code. If the parcels are properly labeled, the driver is required to take them.
